Minute Details of Guiteau's Last Hours and the Final Scene

THE DAY BEFORE.

Chicago, 29 — Washington special:
Deputy Warden Russ was asked to-day bow Guites deported himself. He said:
'The man is as happy as a child. He wants to see nobady but Hicks, and speaks to nobody. The guards are not allowed to speak to him, and he never speaks to them."

"Dog he sharp well?" "Van he goog

"Doe he sleep well?" "Yes, he goes to sivep about 9 or 10 o'clock at night and sleeps like a child till after daylight and sleeps like a child till after daylight in the morning. He sleeps quietly, without any to sing around or muttering or waking."

"What does he eat?" "We give him just what he wante. About 8 o'clock he orders his breakfast. He calls for breakfast, fried potatoes, fried eggs, rolls and coffee. He eats heartly and is an epicure in his diet. He wants his food nicely rrepared and delicately served. At 12 o'clock, noon, he calls for his lunch, and it is served always three poached eggs on it is served always three poached eggs on to st and a cup of coffee. At 4 e'clock he dines, and his dinner is just like hilurch—three poached eggs on tosst and coffee. His meat is cut up for him."
"Don't you give him a kuife and fork, nor a spoon!" "No; no spoons"
"How does he eat then?" "With his fingers."

"Why don't you give him a knife and fork?"
"There is no telling what a man under sentence of death will do. The more quiet the man the closer he has to be watched. It is astonishing to what devices they will resort to kill themselves. Even in spite of the sharpest watch Guiteau might take it into his head to kill himself, and he always acts on the spur of the moment.

This man has given a world of trouble for the past year." The well-meaning officer heaved a deep sigh, as much as to say, "I wish he was gone" But he aid not make any unofficer-like observations.

"What has the man actually in his possession?" was a ked. "Only his Bible," was the reply.

"Has he nothing, then, with which he could kill himself?" "Oh, yes. He could kill himself in fifteen minutes if he was not watched, provided he so desired. He could hang himself with his sheet or He could hang nimself with his sheet or his suspenders or his han ikerchief. No, the only way to do is to watch a man who is under sentence."
"Still, you say he appears happy and satisfied?" "Yes, but it don't do to trust a man under such circumstances He might change his mind."

PAYING A WASH-BILL. Guiteau calmed down this afternoon

Washington, 29.—The letter in the nature of a will by which Guiteau dis-poses of his body is as follows:

 Washigton, June 29th, 1882. To Reverend William A. Hicks:

I, Charles J. Guiteau, of the City of Washington, in the District of Columbia, now under seatence of death, which is to be carried into execution between the hours of 12 and 2 o'clock, on the 30th day hours of 12 and 2 o'clock, on the 30th day of June, A. D. 1882, in the United States jail in said district, do hereby give and grant you my body, after such execution; provided, however, it shall not be used for any mercenary purpose, and I hereby, for good and sufficient considerations given, deliver and transfer to said Hicks my book, entitled "The Truth and Removal," and the copyright thereof, to be used by him in writing a truthful history of my life and execution; and I direct that such history be entitled "The Lifand Work of Charles J. Guiteau," and I hereby solemnly proclaim and anneunce hereby solemnly proclaim and announce to all the world, that no person or persons to all the world, that no person or persons shall ever in any manner use my body for any mencenary purpose whatsoever; and if at any time hereafter any persons shall desire to bonor my remains, they can do it by execting a monument, whereon, shall be inscribed these words: "Here lies the body of Charles J. Guitesu, patriot and Christian. His soul is teau, patriot and Christian. His soul is in glory." (Signed)

CHARLYS J. GUITEAU.
CHAS. H. REED,
JAMES WOODWARD.

THE BEST FRIEND.

Charles H. Reed, counsel for Guiteau, says: I have seen nothing as yet to shake my convictions that Guiteau will die to morrow, without weakpess or faltering His courage is not that of an ordinary criminal, a mere ruffian who takes pride in dying game; it is rather that of a marityr, of a man who suffers and dies for the sake of some religious principle. I thought at one time that he was beginning to show weakness. I saw in the newspapers a spiritual adviser had been called in, and the thought occurred to me that perhaps Guiteau had begun to realize that he had committed a crime and needed divine forgiveness, and that he wished to make preparation for death. The nent time I saw him I said to him: "Charles, I see by the newspapers you have done?" He looked at me with a wild expression in his eyes, and shouted, "No, I haven't called in any minister; I haven't done anything wrong. The minister came off his own accord. I didn't send for him." Two or three days afterwards, I was introduced to Dr. Hicks, whom I had never previously met, and I said to him: "Doctor," has Guiteau ever shown in his talk with you may consciousness of having done wrong, any feeling of repentance, or desire for forgiveness?" "None whatever" he replied. "He has maintained consistently throughout that he has done for that he has done for that he has almost done for the constitution of the constitution. consistently throughout that he has done no wrong, that he has simply done God's service and has nothing to repeat of."

Up to the present time, Reed added, Guiteau has talked of his dea h without any manifestations whatever of feat, or dread. He said to me to-day, "Mr. Feed, what are you going to do with my b dy?" I told him that was a very pain ul subject to talk about, and that I would rather not go into it, but that he would retter not go into it, but that he might rest assured his body would be properly cared for. He said: "I don't care particularly what is d. ne with it, so long as it is not used for gain," I assured him again that his body should not be descrated, or sued for a mercenary what do you mean by that?" he inquired I explained to him the meaning of mercenary, and he said, "That's all right. Perhaps that's the better word, I don't want my body used for gain."

In heading to Heed to day a farewell letter, which he wrote just before hidding him good bye, Guiteau said, "Tais, my best friend, is the only compensation I can give you for your services to me. You have never lied to me, nor deceived me, while nearly everybody else has. I am going to heaven to-morrow, at 1 o'clock, and I wish you were going with me."

Guiteau, about 6 o'clock, took a supper of broiled steak, toast, potatoes and rasp-berries, and was then shaved by Captain Terrens. At 7 o'clock Deputy Warden Russ visited him and found him quietar, but he talked in his usual vein and exhibited some nervousness. Lying down, be slept about fifteen minutes. About 8 be slept about fifteen minutes. About 8 o'clock he requested Dr. Williams to see that the machine was in working order, so that he might go off at 12 o'clock tomorrow. Dr. Hicks and John W. Guitesu called at 1.30. Dr. Hicks was admitted, but he refused to admit John W. Guitesu. He introduced the topic, simply saying he feit like a child going home to his father; that he would see his heavenire father in the recorning. heavenly father in the morning. He read a short poem in simplicity, and joined the doctor in silent prayer. He was at midnight in a better frame of mind than durnight in a better frame of mind than during the day, and said he expected a good rest during the remainder of the night.

It has been decided. Read says, that Guiteau will be buried in the east wing of the jail. The execution will take place about 130. Guiteau has prepared and will read at the proper time what he calls
"My dwing prayer on the gallous" "My dying prayer on the gallows." Reed, who has seen it, describes it as a address or remarks, other than this, not known. 1.45 a.m. - Guiteau is sleeping quietly, except he is frequently disturbed by a crazy negro woman who is making night hideous with yells. He has turned ever once or twice, but otherwise seems to rest

LAST HOURS. United States Jail, Washington, D. C., 50.

Guiteau was very restless during most of the latter part of the night, not sieep-ing more than twenty minutes at a time; Guiteau calmed down this afternoon and said he was ready to die, and wanted to be thung at 12 o'clock, sharp.

After Guiteau and disposed of these matters he read a poem, composed these matters he read a poech, composed by himself, which he calls "Simplicity, or Religious Baby Talk." After reading it alone he attempted to sing it, but broke down in the effort. Guiteau then talked for some time about the future. He remarked that his heart was tender. "I don't think," he said, "I can get through this ordeal without weeping, not heaven of any creat weakness, for prinbecause of any great weakness, for principle in me is strong; but because I am nearer the other world. I nold to the idea that God inspired me." Guiteau subsequently saked that in his books all complimentary remarks about President Arthur and his administration be eliminated. Then he presented Hicks the books that have been the companions of his lonely hours. He told Hicks that he wanted him to offer the first prays, on the confidence in the first prays, on the confidence in the first prays. prayer on the scaffold, saying he (Gui-teau) would then read bis favorite teau) would then read he favorite scriptural passage, the tenth chapter of John, and offer a prayer on his own account. Then he intended, he said, to read his poem "Simplicity." He desired to have it so arranged that just as he uttered the last word the drop should be sprung.

John W. Guiteau arrived at the jail at 9 o'clock and was tollowed in a few minutes by Warden ; Crocker. These two gentlemen with Hicks had a consultation as to the disposition of the body.

9,15.—The prisoner came out in the corridor and exercised for filteen minutes. He walked very briskly making it rather difficult for his guards to keep race with him. The scene about the jail this morning is unique. The office of the jail has been given un completely the state of the pair has
